

Think. Debate. Inspire.

Robert Bosch Academy

The Robert Bosch Academy was founded in 2014 as an institution of the Robert Bosch Stiftung. Located at the foundation's Berlin Office, the Academy offers decision-makers, opinion leaders, and experts the space for confidential exchanges and solution-oriented cooperation on global affairs.

Fellowships

The Richard von Weizsäcker Fellowship was established in honor of the former federal president who served for many years on the Board of Trustees of the Robert Bosch Stiftung. The fellowship offers a residency of several months in Berlin to outstanding personalities from around the world. Every month, up to nine fellows work on the premises of the Robert Bosch Academy.

Interdisciplinary and multilateral dialog is more important than ever. We offer our Fellows insights into German and European decision-making processes. In return, they share their expertise and perspectives and contribute to the public debate.

Robert Bosch Stiftung

Intellectual Space and Community

Residencies at the Robert Bosch Academy provide fellows with the intellectual and physical space to pursue individual research and outreach activities on topics beyond their normal professional commitments. To foster dialogue with the German and international public, the Robert Bosch Academy organizes activities tailored to the background and interests of the respective fellow. By engaging with the fellows, German experts and decision-makers gain new perspectives on major social and political issues; in turn, fellows expand their networks and enrich their expertise with insights into German and European policy debates and decision-making processes. The Robert Bosch Academy creates a growing interdisciplinary and multilateral community of fellows who meet together at the annual Richard von Weizsäcker Forum.

German Perspectives

While the fellows come from a wide array of backgrounds, they are united in their desire to learn more about Berlin and Germany during their stay. The Robert Bosch Academy offers its fellows a comprehensive program with insights into German history, politics, economy, and society.

If you want to make sense of Europe today, be in Berlin. And if you want to make sense of Berlin, be at the Academy - because this is a very open, intellectual space, no institutional interest, you are coming and everything is organized in the way strongly to push and to encourage your curiosity.

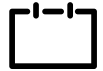

Ivan Krastev, Chairman of the Centre for Liberal Strategies in Sofia (CLS); Fellow of the Robert Bosch Academy

I met some of the most important German people during my Fellowship to exchange perspectives, understandings as well as expectations. Now I can see Germany with Greek eyes and Greece with German eyes.

Being part of the Fellow community means you can spend time with an amazingly diverse group of people who care about values and, each in their different way, try to bolster them. It helps bring mind sets and experiences closer - with no other goal but to try to make sense of an incredibly complex world, and think together about how we can defend what really matters.

Natalie Nougayrède, Editorial Board Member and Columnist at The Guardian; Fellow of the Robert Bosch Academy

The approach of the Robert Bosch Academy is quite original, because there are very few places where you can actually settle down and work on your own chosen topic without being under the pressure of your daily job.
